DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The specification is objected to as failing to provide proper antecedent basis for the claimed subject matter. See 37 CFR 1.75(d)(1) and MPEP § 608.01(o). Correction of the following is required: lack of antecedent basis for the average of minute ventilation values.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

2. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

3. Claims, 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, because the specification, while being enabling for determining minute ventilation values are increasing, does not reasonably provide enablement for determining that the average minute ventilation values are increasing. The specification does not enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to use and make the invention commensurate in scope with these claims. The specification provides for determining when minute ventilation values are increasing (A8) and determining the mean amplitude of the oscillatory component of the minute ventilation (A2) in order to compare the mean amplitude of the oscillatory component to a threshold. See Page 13, line 15-Page 14, line 22 of the Specification and Fig. 4. Claim 1 contains the limitation “an average of those minute ventilation values are increasing” in lines 4-

5. Claim 10 contains the limitation “the average minute ventilation continues to increase”.

4. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

5. Claims 10-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

6. Claim 10 recites the limitation "the average of the minute ventilation values continue to increase" in lines 10-11. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim.

Allowable Subject Matter

7. Claims 1-20 would be allowable if rewritten or amended to overcome the rejection(s) under 35 U.S.C. 112, 1st paragraph and 2nd paragraph, set forth in this Office action. Claims 1, and 10 require deletion of references to "average" minute ventilation values to overcome the 112 35 U.S.C. 112, 1st paragraph rejection. Claim 10 requires proper antecedent basis for "minute ventilation values continue to increase".

The prior art of record fails to teach or suggest a rate adaptive pacer comprising a controller configured to or a method comprising measuring minute ventilation values and determining that those minute ventilation values are increasing, determining an amplitude of an oscillatory component in the measured minute ventilation values to be above a specified threshold value and, if the amplitude of the oscillatory component falls below the specified threshold value as the minute ventilation continues to increase, and setting the breakpoint of the rate response curve equal to the presently measured minute ventilation value.

Kay et al. (6,411,850) shows determining a breakpoint in a rate response curve by measuring respiratory rate and minute ventilation during submaximal exercise and developing a regression analysis. Sun et al. (6,490,485) shows determining a breakpoint in a rate response curve by measuring the number of times and the extent the MV signal input exceeds threshold values.

Conclusion

8. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Sun et al. (6,823,214) and Sun et al. (6,839,593) each show determining the rate response function including the breakpoint based on stored maximum exertion levels (MV levels).
